Sunday of the Last Judgment

By Fr. Lawrence Farley

This day is sometimes called Meatfare Sunday, since it is the last day meat is allowed before the great fast. The gospel for the day, from St. Matthew, focuses on the Last Judgment. In a parable, Christ tells of the day when He will return as King in glory to gather all the nations for judgment, dividing them into two groups, even as a shepherd would separate the sheep from the goats after they had intermingled. Both groups would be stunned by what they heard.

Those on the right hand of honor were commended for their deeds. They had fed Jesus when He was starving, given Him drink when He was dying of thirst. They came to see Him when He languished in prison and visited Him on His sickbed. They would have their just reward—the blessing of the Father as they inherited His Kingdom. But those rewarded spoke up in perplexity—when was Jesus ever starving? Or when did He languish in prison, or moan on a sickbed? Then came the stunning answer: each time they did these things to the poor, who were His humblest brothers, they did it to Him.

Those on the left hand had not heard this exchange, and the triumphant King turned on them in wrath. Let them get out of His face, fleeing like accursed men into hell, for when He was starving, they merely looked on; when He was languishing in prison, they didn't even visit Him, but let Him rot. These were as shocked as the first group and protested that they had done no such thing. The stunning answer came to them as well: each time they refused to help the poor, they affronted Jesus their King also.

The lesson for all is clear: eternal issues are involved in our earthly deeds. Let us walk in love and be abundant in almsgiving and good works, for by doing so we serve our King and save our souls.
